Hey! You smell like a Trekkie

Chicago Tribune

The world of fragrance is about to boldly go where few have ventured before: the Trekkosphere.

Hoping to profit from the May 8 release of J.J. Abrams' new Star Trek film, Maryland-based Genki Wear will release three Star Trek-themed scents on April 24.

John McGonigle, president of Genki, said the two men's colognes and one woman's perfume will retail for about $30.

Soon, Trekkies will be able to channel their inner William Shatner with "Tiberius," based on Captain Kirk's character. The scent is described by Genki Wear to have a "warm vanilla, white musk and sandalwood" base.

But it's the "Pon Farr" perfume that may require a double-take. That's right, it's for the ladies. It actually refers to the Vulcan mating ritual that occurs every seven years. (So maybe this one's only for special occasions?) John Tenuto, merchandise editor of trekmovie.com, the largest independent Star Trek news site, said fans have responded positively to the fragrances.

But some Trekkies still have doubts. "What utter garbage. ... I'll maybe find it at TJ Maxx for $1.99 next Christmas," one online fan said. "I predict incredibly stinky Trek conventions in the near future," another said. While others simply made fun of the idea: "No Worf scent? You know, peaty, with a hint of lilac."

Vermont begins hearings on state's same-sex marriage bill

Associated Press

MONTPELIER, Vt. Nine years after it played host to a bitter fight over civil unions, Vermont's Statehouse is again a gay rights battleground.

More than 200 same-sex marriage opponents, cheering and wearing buttons that read "Marriage—A Mother & Father for Every Child," converged Monday on Montpelier as lawmakers began a week's worth of hearings on a bill that would allow gay and lesbian couples to marry.

If approved, Vermont would join Massachusetts and Connecticut as the only U.S. states that allow gay marriage.

The measure would replace Vermont's first-in-the-nation civil unions law with one that allows marriage of same-sex partners beginning Sept. 1. Civil unions, which confer some rights similar to marriage, would still be recognized but no longer granted after Sept. 1.

Supporters cast the debate as a civil rights issue, saying a civil unions law enacted by Opponents say gay marriage would undermine traditional male-female marriage, rendering men and women interchangeable and destroying the connection between children and marriage. They want the question put to voters in a referendum.

A public hearing is scheduled for Wednesday night at the Capitol, which was the epicenter of the fight in 2000, when the issue divided Vermont and partisans endured hate mail, threatening telephone messages and tense public meetings.

On Monday, opponents organized by churches and a pair of anti-gay marriage groups flooded the hallways of the Capitol and packed into a committee room for a strategy session with Stephen Cable, president of Vermont Renewal.

the state in 2000 has fallen short of the equality it promised same-sex couples. Its appeal has declined too: In 2001, the state granted 1,876 civil unions, compared with only 262 last year.

Riders give tons of bus feedback

Thanks, riders! Public transit peeps wrote in by the bus-load to help provide more clues in the mystery of a No. 55-Garfield bus that a 9-year-old boy's mother said stranded him on Feb. 17, though the CTA said it investigated and found no such incident.

Check out rider reaction to last week's column, plus other observations from around the system.

Shenanigans?

I hate to say it, but I ride the No. 55-Garfield from the Garfield stop to Ellis every day on my way home. I usually get on at around 5:15 p.m. or so and get off at 5:25-5:30 p.m. My No. 55 was not broken down that day. Doesn't mean it didn't break down after me, but it was smooth sailing on [Feb. 17]. Sorry, little dude. Sounds like he may have been feeding his mom a line.

—LINDSAY COFIELD, 25, HYDE PARK

Public transit, rated PG?

I wanted to make a comment about the article in which a 9-year-old was stranded after a bus [allegedly] broke down. What in the world is a 9-year-old doing riding a bus alone? It seems that the only verified fact in this article is that the child was riding a bus alone while his mother sat at home hoping for the best. I strongly suggest a parenting class for this mother. CTA bus drivers are not baby-sitters. She is lucky nothing terrible happened to this child. He might not be so lucky next time.

—REBECCA VAN AMAN, 41, LAKEVIEW

Class act

Maybe the 9-year-old used the broken down bus as an excuse to come home late. That's what I do when I'm late for class.

—JONATHAN "TRAXXION" BRADLEY, 21, SOUTH LOOP

Silence that voice

What is up with the new lady CTA announcer? The announcements about inbound/outbound trains have been newly recorded and they're horrible.

She sounds like she's patronizing us. Bring back the old Chicago-accented lady, please.

—KATE GALLEG0, 27, OAK PARK

Back door drama

Is anyone else having issues with the new hybrid double-bus back doors? Over the past two weeks, each time I'm on one (usually on the No. 156-LaSalle), the back doors go crazy and the bus shuts down. I've heard the drivers warning riders to "stay away from the sensors." I'm not sure what the deal is, but if there are special instructions for the hybrids' back doors, the CTA should let riders know.

OBAMA BLASTS BAILED-OUT AIG FOR HANDING OUT MILLIONS IN BONUSES

Associated Press

WASHINGTON Joining a wave of public anger, President Obama blistered insurance giant AIG for “recklessness and greed” Monday and pledged to try to block it from handing its executives $165 million in bonuses after taking billions in federal bailout money.

“How do they justify this outrage to the taxpayers who are keeping the company afloat?” Obama asked. “This isn’t just a matter of dollars and cents. It’s about our fundamental values.”

Obama aggressively joined other officials in criticizing American International Group, the company that is fast becoming the poster boy for Americans’ bailout blues. Bailout steps for AIG have totaled more than $170 billion since September.

Obama had scheduled a speech Monday to announce new help for recession-pounded small businesses. But first, he said, he had a few words to say about AIG. He lost his voice at one point and ad-libbed, “Excuse me, I’m choked up with anger here.” It was just a light aside, but he meant the sternness of his remarks to come through.

“This is a corporation that finds itself in financial distress due to recklessness and greed,” Obama declared.

He said he had directed Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner to “pursue every legal avenue to block these bonuses and make the American taxpayer whole.”

One reason the AIG bonus giveaway is such a compelling story—and a politically troubling one for Obama if not neutralized—is that it offers a simple story line that appears to sum up ways in which the federal bailouts have gone awry.

“This is just the kind of issue that galvanizes public outrage,” said Paul Light, professor of public service at New York University. “It’s always the tangible stuff, the things that ordinary Americans can relate to. They don’t know the first thing about credit default swaps. But they do know about bonuses. And it’s just the sort of thing that will undermine any future bailout activity.”

The notion of AIG paying out big bonuses while failing as a business likely won’t be taken well in Illinois, where the median income for a family is $65,761, according to an estimate on the U.S. Census Bureau’s Web site—or in

MAD DASH TO CUT OFF BONUSES

New York Atty. Gen. Andrew Cuomo said Monday that he has issued subpoenas for the names of AIG employees given millions of dollars in bonuses despite their possible roles in the insurance giant’s near-collapse.

Cuomo said his office will investigate whether the $165 million in payments are fraudulent under state law because they were promised when the company knew it wouldn’t have the money to cover them. AIG reported this month that it lost $61.7 billion in the fourth quarter of last year, the largest corporate loss in history. AP

Chicagoland, where the regional unemployment rate has risen above 7 percent.

Obama’s comments came on the same day a new poll showed slippage in his approval rating. The poll by the Pew Research Center showed it dropped from 64 percent in February to 59 percent this month amid divisions of opinions over his economic proposals and what the pollsters said was a growing perception that the president is listening more to his party’s liberals than to its moderates.

Still, those surveyed generally gave the president favorable marks for doing as much as he can to try to fix the economy, and few blame him for making the economy worse.

Thus far, AIG officials have refused to rescind the bonus payments. In a letter to Geithner over the weekend, the government-appointed chief executive of AIG,

Edward Liddy, said the bonuses were legally binding obligations and the firm’s “hands are tied.”

Still, pressure was building on that issue—and on the government to rework its AIG bailout to make sure taxpayers are repaid as much of the $170 billion as possible.

Even Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke weighed in, saying on CBS’ “60 Minutes” that the AIG bailout angered him the most and that he “slammed the phone more than a few times on discussing AIG.”

But in deciding to rescue AIG, the government worried that if it did not bail out the insurer, its collapse could lead to a cascading chain reaction of losses, jeopardizing the stability of the worldwide financial system. Bernanke acknowledged as much in his “60 Minutes” interview.

In addition to the bonuses, it was disclosed Sunday that AIG used $90 billion-plus in federal aid to pay foreign and domestic banks, some of which had received their own multi-billion-dollar U.S. government bailouts.

The recipients included Goldman Sachs, at $12.9 billion, and three European banks—France’s Societe Generale at $11.9 billion, Germany’s Deutsche Bank at $11.8 billion, and Britain's Barclays PLC at $8.5 billion. Merrill Lynch, which also is undergoing federal scrutiny of its bonus plans and which is now part of Bank of America, had received $6.8 billion as of Dec. 31.

The money went to banks to cover their losses on complex mortgage investments, as well as for collateral needed for other transactions.

Still, the effects of a potential economic collapse weren't top of mind for taxpayers seething over reports of AIG's bonus payday. Said one poster on a chicagotribune.com message board: "Why are the producers of this business still working for AIG? Why weren't they fired long ago? Why aren't they being fired now?" NEW YORK TIMES, REDEYE CONTRIBUTED.

PUBLIC ENEMIES?

AIG isn't the only target of taxpayers' recession rage. Here are some other companies that have drawn ire for being tied up in government bailout talks. REDEYE

Citigroup

The Wall Street Journal reported Monday that Chief Executive Vikram Pandit received $38.2 million in pay, perks and stocks in 2008. The government gave Citigroup $45 billion in bailout money that year.

Bear Stearns

JP Morgan Chase received billions of dollars from the government in a joint but unsuccessful effort to try to save the once mighty investment banking firm. Thousands of investors lost billions as the bank spiraled into the ground at full speed.

GM, Ford and Chrysler

The carmakers' top executives came under heavy fire last year when they first traveled to Washington to appeal for government help—in private jets.

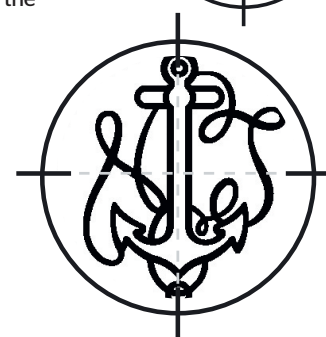

Bank of America

Received billions in bailout money, but told the Boston Herald last week that marketing is crucial to corporate growth, striking back at those who say bank bailout recipients shouldn't sponsor fancy sporting events.

GE Capital

It's not a bank, but it qualifies for federal debt coverage—to the tune of $139 billion—because the General Electric subsidiary also owns a federal savings bank and a loan company.

Northern Trust

The Chicago-based custody bank received a $1.6 billion federal bailout and then sponsored the lavish PGA Tour Northern Trust Open. TMZ reported that Northern Trust flew in hundreds of employees and clients, hosting dinners and concerts during the week of the tournament.

REDEYE ON THE SPOT RedEye asked: What do you think of the bonuses executives at AIG are getting?

"It's really unfair and inconsiderate. They make way more money than the average person. ... It's not right when there are so many people losing their jobs and homes due to their screw-up."

Keisha West, 22, East Rogers Park

"I think it's disgusting because these guys already have enough money in their pockets. There's no reason to give them more of the taxpayer's dollar."

Delia Neylon, 25, Merrillville, Ind.

"It's typical. The only reason we know about it is because of the kind of financial trouble they're in is making the news. It's typical because those people getting the bonuses, that's a huge part of their annual income."

Michael Young, 32, Humboldt Park

"It's sickening. They still think it's OK to give themselves bonuses. They're out of touch with the regular Joe. I'm glad Obama actually said something."

James Crook, 27, Ravenswood

"Why should you be rewarded for failing? If they didn't fail, they wouldn't have collapsed."

HOLEY TERROR

City endures another brutal pothole season

Chicago Tribune

Last winter, it was a crater-ridden stretch that drivers feared to navigate.

This year, the northernmost stretch of Lake Shore Drive is a smooth cruise, an island of safety for tires and car axles in a hazard-filled city.

The resurfaced stretch of North Lake Shore Drive between Foster Avenue and Irving Park Road is a rare success story as Chicagoans endure a second consecutive brutal pothole season. City crews patched more than 2,300 potholes along the 1½ mile stretch in the first half of last year's season, but have had to apply only 45 patches to that stretch of North Lake Shore in the same months this year.

But city transportation officials said they have been unable to resurface other heavily traveled Chicago roads, citing a three-year drop-off in state funding for the resurfacing of arterial roads. Instead the city is spending $12 million on temporary repair efforts that can last as little as days on high-traffic streets.

"As the pavement deteriorates, the more calls we're getting for potholes," said Chicago Department of Transportation Commissioner Thomas Byrne. "It will take us longer this year, I believe, to clear out the pothole backlog."

Carlos Varela of Portage Park learned about potholes the hard way two years ago. Varela, 26, recalled hitting a tire-walloping pothole submerged in water at West Addison Street and North Kedzie Avenue.

The pothole flattened both the passenger side tires on his Dodge Neon and damaged the rim on the front passenger side.

Varela said he pulled his car over to the side of the road, then walked to a nearby tire store. He rolled new tires, one by one, to his car. All in all, the damage cost nearly $200.

"As far as my car, I was ready to leave it on the Workers repair potholes earlier this year on Milwaukee Avenue. Officials say they've been unable to resurface heavily traveled roads, citing a three-year drop-off in funding. JOSE M. OSORIO/TRIBUNE side of the road and just junk it," said Varela, who still drives his Neon. "The worst it's had is alignment problems since then, nothing major."

Adam Lindstaedt lived in San Diego for six years before recently moving back to the northwest suburbs. Two weeks ago, Lindstaedt, 24, tried to drive his father's U-Haul-sized work truck down Route 12 through heavy rain in Lake Zurich. But his right tires got caught up in a pothole-riddled stretch of road, nearly spinning the truck out.

"I was going 20 mph the rest of the way because I was afraid of doing it again," said Lindstaedt, a talent buyer for Logan Square Auditorium.

City pothole repairs have been at full throttle since January, filling thousands each day, seven days a week. Yet the numbers continue to climb, with 11,000 open potholes in the 311 system Monday, the highest mark this year, said CDOT spokesman Brian Steele.

The best long-term solution is resurfacing, and the city relies upon state and county funds for putting new pavement on arterial roads. With no state funding other than the Lake Shore Drive project since 2006, arterial road resurfacing in Chicago has dropped from 56 miles in 2004 to only 3.5 miles last year, Byrne said.

State and city agencies hope that money from the federal stimulus package would allow resurfacing projects to proceed this summer. A list of "shovel-ready" projects released by IDOT includes repaving stretches of Touhy, Cicero and Western Avenues. The city's list, released last week, included several resurfacing jobs on arterial roads.

But transportation officials said that even resurfacing eventually is no match for Chicago's weather. "You can't win a battle against potholes. All you can do is try to keep up as much as you can," said Herb Schumann, chief financial officer for the Cook County Highway Department.

Cameras to catch more than speeders?

Aldermen on Monday began discussing using the city's ever-growing legion of red-light cameras to check for vehicle liability insurance. The city could net nearly $10 million in fines just by citing non-insured vehicles that also get photo-ticketed for a red-light violation, said Ald. Ed Burke (14th), who brought the idea to the City Council Traffic Committee.

$2.7 million for now-freed man

A Chicago man would receive $100,000 for each of 27 years he spent behind bars before DNA testing set him free, under a settlement endorsed Monday by the City Council Finance Committee. The money, $2.7 million, would be paid to the estate of Paul Terry, who suffered profound mental damage behind bars. Terry and Michael Evans were both convicted at age 17 for the 1976 South Side rape and murder of 9-year-old Lisa Cabassa.

Bad news for Block 37

Yoga clothing retailer Lululemon USA said it no longer plans to open a store at Block 37 in the Loop—the second tenant to pull out of the project in four months. The retailer said it originally agreed in 2007 to go into the shopping center, still under construction, as long as it was located next to an Apple Store, according to a lawsuit Lululemon filed against the project, known as 108 N. State Retail LLC, last week.

Review: Hiring of Burris' son OK

A review conducted by Gov. Quinn's office has found no "improper conduct" in the hiring of U.S. Sen. Roland Burris' son by a state agency six months ago. The circumstances surrounding the hiring of Roland Burris II as senior counsel came under question late last month after the elder Burris admitted he attempted to raise funds for former Gov. Rod Blagojevich and had more contact than previously admitted with Blagojevich's closest allies as he lobbied for the Senate appointment.

In what may be among the lesser-known deterrents exercised by our nation's security forces, the Border Patrol is deploying up-tempo Mexican folk songs about tragic border crossings to dissuade would-be illegal immigrants.

The agency has paid—how much, it won't say—a Washington-based advertising company to write, record and distribute an album, "Migra Corridos," to radio stations in Mexico. Its title, its makers say, is intended to mean "songs of the immigrant" but "migras" is commonly understood as a code word for Border Patrol in much of Mexico.

"It's pretty slick," says Jason Ciliberti, a spokesman with the Border Patrol in Washington.

HIDDEN MESSAGES

Many of the stations in Mexico that play the songs and the listeners who request them are seemingly oblivious to who is behind the bouncy ballads of death, dashed dreams and futile attempts at manhood.

"Before you cross the border, remember that you can be just as much a man by chickening out and staying
"Because it's better to keep your life than ending up dead."

Seattle newspaper goes Web-only

9 SEATTLE The Seattle Post-Intelligencer, which has chronicled the news of the city for 146 years, will print its final edition Tuesday.

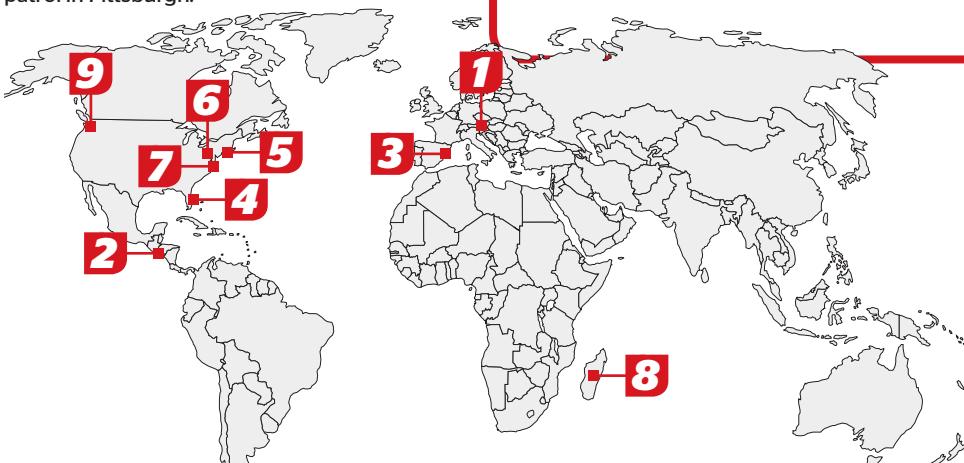

Hearst Corp., owner of the P-I, said Monday that it failed to find a buyer for the newspaper, which it put up for a 60-day sale in January after years of losing money. Now the P-I will shift entirely to the Web.

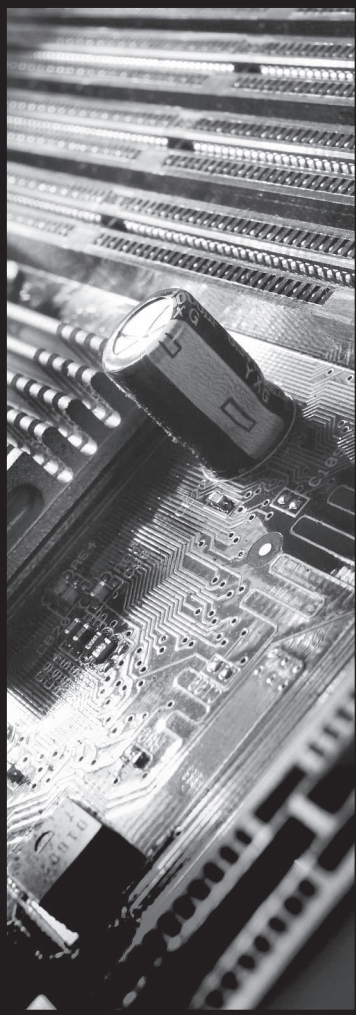

"Tonight will be the final run, so let's do it right," publisher Roger Oglesby told the newsroom.

Hearst's decision to abandon the print product in favor of an Internet-only version is the first for a large American newspaper.

The move to end the print edition leaves the P-I's larger rival, The Seattle Times, as the only mainstream daily in the city. The Times plans to deliver a copy of the newspaper to every P-I subscriber on Wednesday, spokeswoman Jill Mackie said.

GO GREEN!

The birth of one growing spring fashion trend is pretty easy to nail down: On St. Patrick's Day in 1978, at a Spring Training game, the Cincinnati Reds came out wearing green uniforms.

Since that day, other baseball teams—teams in all sports, really—have jumped on the Kelly green bandwagon.

"It all started with baseball teams," says Scott Hagel, senior director of corporate communications for the Bears, who now sell green T-shirts, "but our fan base certainly embraces St. Patrick's Day."

"It's a lot of fun," says Howard Smith, senior vice president for licensing for Major League Baseball. "The fans love it, especially those fans who are Irish."

The trend has grown so that a Chicago sports fan could build a snappy ensemble, all in green.

All our local teams—the Sox, Cubs, Bulls, Blackhawks and Bears—offer some type of polo or T-shirt.

Both the Cubs and White Sox offer shamrock-festooned boxers. Classy.

Jerseys

Take it up a notch with a jersey. The Hawks have a spiffy-looking one, and the Cubs offer a batting-practice jersey. (Bargain-hunters, take note: Last week, a green Bulls jersey sporting the No. 3 of long-gone Ben Wallace was cut from $74.95 to a recession-friendly $37.20.)

Outerwear

Keep off the chill with hoodies and sweat shirts (Sox, Hawks, Cubs) or track jackets (Sox and Cubs).

SHAMROCK SCUFFLE

As Bulls battle for last playoff spot, Celtics come calling on St. Patrick's Day

RedEye

Somehow, some way, the Bulls have the playoffs in sight. To get there, they'll need all the help they can get. Enter the Boston Celtics, one of the NBA's best teams. On St. Patrick's Day, no less.

The Bulls will need more than home-court advantage and green jerseys to topple the defending champs, who just so happen to have a leprechaun as a mascot. They'll also need to counteract the green river of luck flowing the Celts' way. Here's how they can do it.

Gotta be the shoes

3 You know that statue of Michael Jordan outside the United Center? For this game, at least, it should be placed under Boston's basket. Let's see Paul Pierce drive the lane on that. Bronze MJ will take the charge every time.

March Madness may be all about college basketball to a lot of people, but to me the real madness in March is watching the Cubs and White Sox play Spring Training games without a "legitimate" lead-off hitter going into the season again.

We asked our Twitter followers if Tuesday's play-in game officially kicks off the NCAA Tournament. Here's what some of them said.

@jariyac: "Tuesday's NCAA game is a game, isn't it? So why not start dancing early?"

@andyphelan45: "Tip of the first game when the bracket has 64 teams is the beginning of the Madness. You can't have Madness without 64 teams."

@gibbs12: "No, it's a thunder-stealer like an old episode of 'Baywatch' that has 30 minutes of Stephanie before any CJ."

@mrwboilers: "Everyone but the NCAA knows that the play-in game is a joke and it needs to go away."

@phampants: "Yes. One day #65 will beat #64. Beat overall #1 in OT. Dances all the way to Final 4, Championship and win it all! We can dream."

@sandiman: "No, nobody cares, plus there are always slackers who wait until the last second to fill out their bracket ..."

@csuttile: "Only if you consider the World Baseball Classic the start of baseball season. It's minor league at best."

@KyleEllis: "Absolutely not. That game is a necessary evil for the tourney to work, but no one takes it seriously."

Pants

The Sox and Cubs offer cotton print shamrock-decorated Dublin pants.

Hats

And top it all off with a hat. The Sox, Hawks and Bulls all offer sporty baseball-style caps. But let's go with the Cubs' green knit stocking cap. It's stylish for St. Paddy's, but also a smart accessory for baseball in Chicago in April. And sometimes May.

Accessories

Pull on a green Cubs visor or wear green and white Cubs beads. Slip a green Hawks puck in your pocket.

Q101.1's Alex Quigley is a big Bears and Cubs fan. That explains a lot. Listen to him from 7 to 10 p.m. weekdays.

1 Who do you have in Tuesday's NCAA tourney play-in game?	Something State A&M.	My heart says Alabama State. My toilet humor-ridden brain says Morehead State.	Who doesn't root for Morehead?	Harrison University over PCU.	A bottle of bourbon, (Jimmy RULES!) one hooker and some RC Cola. @salaminizer
2 Make a prediction about the NIT.	It will have all the allure of the World Baseball Classic.	The mighty Wildcats will win it all, and Craig Moore will become a household name.	Florida's No. 1 among the losers! See you in hell, San Diego State.	For a record-breaking 30th straight year, I will not watch it.	Florida wins; only Tracy cares. @andyphe1an45
3 Northwestern is playing postseason basketball. What do you think of that?	Wake me when they reach the NCAA tourney.	I don't think. I cheer mindlessly.	Sounds like a case of pay-to-play. Isn't Blago a Northwestern grad?	See above. I feel like a "Go Illini" works well here too.	It's good for HS ball ... it shows local talent they can compete without leaving home. @cashewredneck
4 What's ailing the Blackhawks?	Clearly, not enough cowbell.	Might be lockjaw. Probably doesn't help that they're heading to N.J. and Columbus next.	They need to wear more pads to handle three periods.	They need to toughen up. Serious answer: Punch more dudes in the face.	They are not the Red Wings. @wildbill77
5 In what sports-related way are you celebrating St. Patrick's Day?	By throwing up on my NCAA picks.	I plan to throw boiled cabbage at the Denver Broncos. Trade Jay Cutler! Do it now!	By praying that I see Lou Piniella go bra this year. Moobs forever.	Wearing my green Cubs shirt, randomly filling out brackets, a little Mario Golf, and crying.	Marathon Jameson shots. @ChiFortunate72

Jay makes the cut

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. Jay Cutler says he wants to break up. The Denver Broncos want to make up.

The Pro Bowl quarterback was a no-show on Monday for coach Josh McDaniels' first team meeting and the start of the Broncos' off-season workouts, and if he gets his way, he'll never step foot in the team's training facility again.

"The Denver Broncos confirm that Jay Cutler has requested a trade," team spokesman Jim Saccomano told The Associated Press on Monday.

So, what are you waiting for, Bears? Cutler could be the answer to Chicago's QB problems for years to come. Let the stats show the way.

The NCAA Tournament starts Thursday, right? Wrong, technically. It starts Tuesday with the play-in game to set the field of 64. I've watched this game before, but it always lacks excitement. Here now, my TV picks.

NHL Blackhawks at New Jersey 6 p.m. CSN

The Hawks are just two points up on Vancouver for home ice in the playoffs.

NBA Bulls vs. Boston 7:30 p.m. WGN

Is there any doubt the Celtics will beat the Bulls on St. Pat's Day?

NCAA TOURNAMENT Alabama St. vs. Morehead St. 6:30 p.m. ESPN

Do I not care because they have no chance or because they stink?

HOMETOWN HITS

The Bears re-signed linebacker Nick Roach, an exclusive rights free agent, on Monday.

» Hunter Hillenmeyer and Dusty Dvoracek will sit out the team's three-day mini-camp that starts Tuesday while they recover from injuries.

Forward Patrick Sharp, who has been sidelined since Feb. 14 with a left knee injury, was on the ice with the Blackhawks as they practiced at the United Center on Monday. The veteran didn't participate in contact drills but said afterward he hopes to reach that point by the end of the week.

MILWAUKEE 9, CUBS 6

Jeff Samardzija gave up five runs in the first inning after getting the first two outs, and the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Cubs 9-6 on Monday.

KANSAS CITY 11, WHITE SOX 7

Corky Miller is emerging as a strong favorite to win the backup catcher's job after throwing out David DeJesus and hitting a home run Monday in the White Sox's 11-7 loss to the Royals.

Jon Busch injured his thumb during a shooting drill in Mexico and took some time off to rest it. The Fire goalkeeper returned to action in Saturday's preseason game against L.A. and said the thumb is feeling better. "It feels good," said Busch, who played 60 minutes in the 1-1 draw with L.A. "[But] according to the doctors, it's still healing."

ONE-LINERS

» Ticket sales fell about 15 percent for this year's Big Ten men's basketball tournament—from 80,012 to 68,098—and organizers blamed the drop on the struggling economy.
» Arena Football players and management have reached agreement on a new collective bargaining deal, paving the way for the league to restart play next year. » Anheuser-Busch ended its sponsorship of the NHRA on Monday.

NOW ON STAGE!

The green party

Celebrate St. Pat's at these 10 spots

By Janine Schaults

In the wake of a weekend packed with St. Pat's parades and parties, don't let the real deal on Tuesday get left behind. Whether you're seeking an all-out bar bash or a reprieve from the pulsating crowds sporting green beer-stained tongues, let your inner Irish shine with these no-cover parties.

The Shire Public House

3328 N. Lincoln Ave. 773-935-6391

11 a.m.-2 a.m.

This Lakeview tavern casts off its English heritage with an Irish-themed open mic night. Before hitting the stage to sing "The Wild Rover," you'll need some liquid courage. Pints of Three Floyds Brian Boru Old Irish Red ($4) should do the trick.

Paddy Long's

1028 W. Diversey Pkwy. 773-290-6988

11 a.m.-2 a.m.

Start the day with kilted lads and lasses and their blaring bagpipes, then stick around until DJ Turkey steps in to spin Irish favorites and Top 40 tunes (8 p.m.). Just try not to spill that $5 Beamish pint while you're working it on the dance floor.

O'Callaghan's

29 W. Hubbard St. 312-527-1180

11 a.m.-4 a.m.

Not everyone can feign sickness or play hooky from work on St. Patrick's Day. Join other late-night clock punchers at this bustling River North hideaway and toast Ireland's patron saint until 4 a.m. Order from a scaled-down menu until 3 a.m.

Pint

1547 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-772-0990
11 a.m.-2 a.m.

This Wicker Park sports bar squashes the notion that leprechauns are just a figment of the imagination. From 9-11 p.m., an actual leprechaun will patrol the bar pouring free shots for revelers. OK, so an actor named Duane will make the rounds in costume, but who would turn down a freebie?

Durbin's Restaurant & Lounge

10240 S. Kedzie Ave. 708-499-0022
11 a.m.-2 a.m.

As Beverly recovers from Sunday's blowout up and down Western Avenue, those still able and willing to don green flair can head to this bar and eatery. Corned beef and cabbage has its moment in the spotlight in both entree ($9.95) and sandwich ($6.50) form. Let a bevy of bagpipers and Irish dancers dazzle the senses as you dull yours with green beer pints ($2.75).

F. O'Mahony's

3701 N. Broadway. 773-549-0226

Noon-2 a.m.

This Lakeview hub of all things Irish is ready to quench your thirst with 14-ounce pints of Magners cider ($5) and 20-ounce pints of Guinness ($6). Less traditional cocktails of the day include the Spicy Leprechaun (Patron tequila and Jameson, $8).

Wild Pug

4810 N. Broadway. 773-784-4811

4 p.m.-2 a.m.

Sleep in and recover from the weekend—the St. Patty's Day revelry at this Uptown spot doesn't start till 4 p.m. Dive right into a steaming plate of corned beef (courtesy of the kitchen at neighbor Crew Bar & Grill) and pair it with a green Miller Lite ($3). Try Jameson shots ($3) if you prefer your drinks in their natural state.

Sully's House Tap Room & Grill

1501 N. Dayton St. 312-929-2779

11 a.m.-2 a.m.

Head to this Old Town hang to soak up the sounds of Old Town School of Folk Music musicians (5 p.m.) in between bites of corned beef ($5) and curry fries ($5). Irish car bombs (yeah, we don't like the name either) are on special for $6.

O'Shaughnessy's Public House

4557 N. Ravenswood Ave.

773-944-9896

11 a.m.-2 a.m.

You can eat and drink for under $10 at this Ravenswood haunt, thanks to $4 burgers with fries and $4 Stella pints. In the shots department, there's Jameson for traditionalists and Leprechaun Pee (a mix of vodka, triple sec and Apple Pucker) for, well, anyone who can stand to order it (both $5).

Mrs. Murphy & Sons Irish Bistro

3905 N. Lincoln Ave. 773-248-3905

2 p.m.-2 a.m.

You'll feel miles removed from green-beer territory inside this North Center restaurant and bar. Indulge in the fish and chips salad ($8.50) or delve straight into comfort food territory with beef-and-Guinness stew ($16).

TUESDAY DEAL

Nelson Algren tribute

Harold Washington Library, Pritzker Auditorium, 400 S. State St.

Before your next round of St. Pat's partying, pay tribute to the late Chicago author at the Story Week Festival of Writers. Author Joe Meno hosts readings by local scribes Stephanie Kuehnert ("I Wanna Be Your Joey Ramone"), J. Adams Oaks ("Why I Fight") and others. 6 p.m. 312-369-7611.

tue 17 St. Patrick's Day
Bennigan's, 150 S. Michigan Ave. 312-427-0570.
The Chicago staple returns to Michigan Avenue just in time for green beer. Festivities kick off at noon with a live broadcast from Mike LeBaron of WCFS-FM (105.9-FM). At 6 p.m., '80s cover band Wedding Banned performs, but our favorite part of the day has to be between 5-8 p.m., when plates of corned beef and cabbage are free. Get $3 well drinks and $2.25 green Bud Lights all day. Restaurant opens at 11 a.m.

$10 haircuts
Urban Joe Barbersalon, 3324 N. Clark St. 773-529-5637.
Guys, you may feel that you've always been a cut above the rest. Now's your time to prove it. Get half-price cuts all month at this so-called guys-on-the-go salon that trades stuffy salon vibes for no-nonsense grooming in a sports-friendly atmosphere. Walk-in appointments only. Noon.

wed 18 'Thelma & Louise'
Red Kiva, 1108 W. Randolph St. 312-226-5577.
The West Loop lounge's new Chick Flicks series doesn't mess around. See what's perhaps the most chick flickiest of 'em all, Ridley Scott's 1991 adventure drama starring Susan Sarandon and Geena Davis, with a cameo by Brad Pitt to boot. Includes half-price bottles of wine and free popcorn, plus the chance to win a half-price treatment at Kaya Day Spa. 7 p.m. No cover.

thu 19 St. Joseph's Day
La Madia, 59 W. Grand Ave. 312-329-0400.
On the heels of St. Patrick's big day in the spotlight comes another saintly reason to indulge — this time in food, which you should need by now to balance your eating-to-drinking ratio. Stop by this River North pizzeria on feast day for complimentary fava bean-and-pancetta bruschetta. 11:15 a.m.

fri 20 Sing-along 'Xanadu'
Music Box Theatre, 3733 N. Southport Ave. 773-871-6604.
Kick off the weekend in neon glory as Dick O'Day and Hell in a Handbag productions present a campy screening of the 1980 musical fantasy starring the fabulously coiffed Olivia Newton-John. BYO legwarmers and come ready to sing (lyrics appear on the screen). You could even win tickets to see "Xanadu" at Drury Lane Theatre Water Tower Place (closing March 29). 11:55 p.m. $12. GHOST TOWNS AND GLOBAL CITIES

Can the Midwest survive globalization?

President Obama and Congress have pledged billions to save the American economy from the brink. But will it help the Midwest succeed in a global era? Chicago may be adapting, but what about cities like Cincinnati or St. Louis? Join us for a discussion about the latest wave of the economic crisis and whether the heartland can recover from this downward spiral.

Digital fitness

Getting the DVD workout without the DVD

Associated Press

The Web is replacing fitness DVDs as people seek cheaper, more varied workouts that they can access with the click of a mouse and do somewhere other than their living room. Fitness enthusiasts can watch workouts online, download them to their iPods, stream them from Netflix to their TVs and even create their own workout videos. Here are some tech-savvy ways that you can get a fun workout without spending a lot of money or going to the store.

YOUTUBE

Thousands of people are accessing workouts posted for the people by the people. A search of "fitness videos" produced 161,000 results. Lorie Baker's Pilates Routine has more than a million page views. Popular trainers such as fitness walking guru Leslie Sansone, celeb trainer Tracey Anderson and Jillian Michaels of "The Biggest Loser" offer workouts here.

Cost: Free.

FITTV

In addition to on-air programs such as Gilad's Bodies in Motion, the digital cable channel has workouts through Discovery Networks' video-on-demand service. The workouts are under the "Health on Call" section.

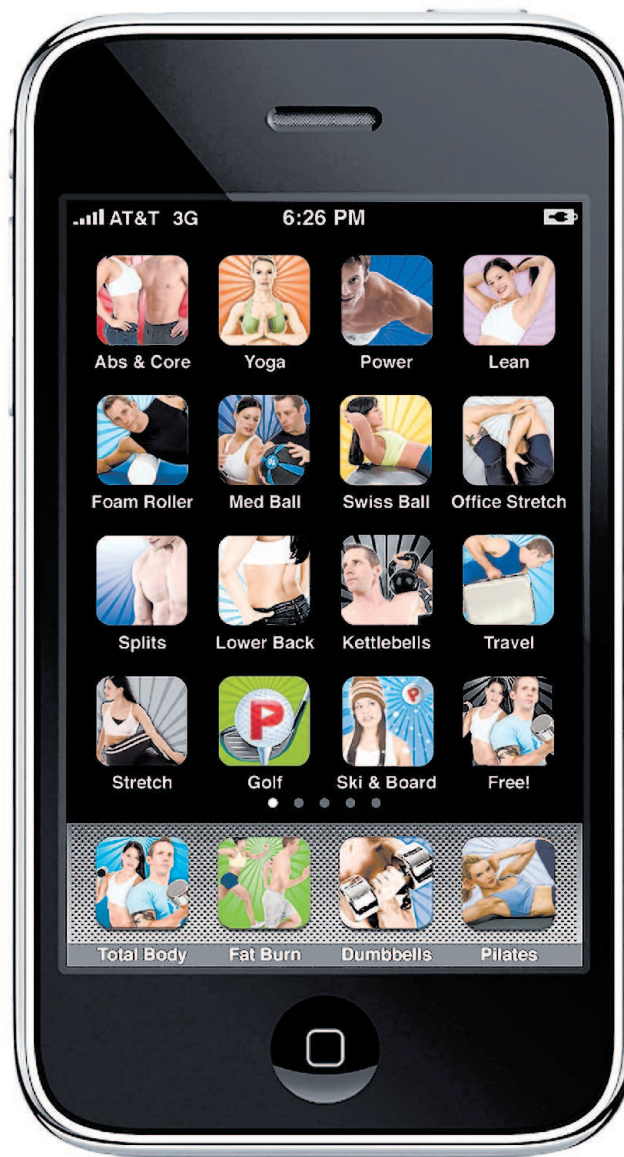

Cost: FitTV is available in millions of homes across the country. The VOD offerings are complimentary with most digital cable packages.

NETFLIX

Find fitness DVDs through the online movie rental service, from "Carmen Electra's Aerobic Striptease" to "Jillian Michaels' 30-Day Shred." Fitness enthusiasts can go back in time with workouts from Jane Fonda or exercise with iconic fitness instructors like Denise Austin and Richard Simmons. Cost: A Netflix unlimited plan starts at $8.99 a month. A Netflix-ready device for streaming is $99.

EXERCISETV

Choose from hundreds of workouts—dance, walking cardio and even striptease through the on-demand fitness network, which is available to digital cable subscribers. The channel includes more than 200 free workouts. The site exercisetv.tv features free streaming video for many workouts. Cost: The cost is free for subscribers. Video downloads start at 99 cents, and consumers can purchase DVDs for as little as $7.99.

ITUNES

iTunes features a ton of fitness content. The Nike Sport Music page has coaching runs with Lance Armstrong, Serena Williams and others. Download the audio workouts to an iPod or iPhone and let the athletes motivate you to run farther and faster. Check out the video and audio podcasts under Health: Fitness & Nutrition for more yoga workouts and overall fitness advice. iPhone and iPod touch applications include iSit-ups, an exercise training program for abs.

Cost: Podcasts are free. Songs on iTunes are 99 cents. The Nike Sport Music albums start at $9.99; iPhone and iPod touch applications vary in price but many are free or 99 cents.

OTHER ONLINE RESOURCES

There's no shortage of workouts on the Internet.

» Fitnessmagazine.com has more than 20 free workout videos. The Build a Video Workout tool allows users to customize a video workout based on the body part they want to tone, the time they have and the equipment they own. Downloading the workouts to your iPod requires a membership to the Fitness Download Club, which is $9.95 a month for four downloads, one each week.

» Yogatoday.com offers free, one-hour yoga classes.

» With a subscription to youcanmakeitfit.com, members can access more than 100 streaming videos, downloadable podcasts and printable workouts. Many of the resources are free. A monthly subscription is $14.95.

Jessica Sharp uses a free yoga Web site to lead her through a session at her home in Philadelphia. The Internet is serving as a popular and diverse alternative to home DVD workouts. AP

COCKTAIL

Irish bacon sour

Green beer is fine and everything, but this St. Patrick's Day cocktail recipe from Nacional 27's Adam Seger sounds too good to pass up. Bacon-infused whiskey, egg whites and maple syrup? Bring it on! FEELING LUCKY?

Happy St. Patrick's Day, Chicago! On a holiday when the luck of the Irish is supposed to be with just about every Tom, Dick and Harry you meet, RedEye decided to take a look at the people and events making news now to see just how fortunate—or unfortunate—they really are. Here now, our St. Patrick's Day Celebrity Luck Index.

Lacrosse

The prep-school sport is picking up mainstream buzz with constant story lines on the CW update of "90210," and—get this—there's a comedy called "Crooked Arrows" in the works about a high school lacrosse team, according to The Hollywood Reporter.

INLUCK

Lindsay Lohan

A judge removed an arrest warrant for the actress Monday, saying she had been compliant with the alcohol education terms that were a part of her probation for a 2007 DUI conviction.

Joaquin Phoenix

Even his "Two Lovers" co-star, Gwyneth Paltrow, is skeptical of his foray into rap music, telling MTV UK she's "not 100 percent sure" he has quit acting for good.

Jessica Simpson

At a show over the weekend in California, Simpson flubbed the lyrics to "Remember That," according to Us Weekly. Awkward!

Jack Nicholson

He's had his name pulled into the Lindsay Lohan drama, which seems to be starting up again after people.com reported that LiLo visited his home in the wee hours over the weekend.

"Watchmen"

Ticket sales for the hero flick plummeted 67 percent over the weekend, according to E! Online. Adding insult to injury, it was beat out by Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson's "Race to Witch Mountain."

Rashida Jones and Jason Segel

Grainy photos of co-stars Jones and Segel were posted to Twitter on Saturday after they said they weren't on board with the micro-blogging service.

Gisele Bündchen and Tom Brady

Newlyweds Bündchen and Brady were spotted kickin' it in beautiful Brazil over the weekend. They were there so Brady could meet the Brazil native's family, according to people.com.

Richard Dean Anderson as MacGyver
PARAMOUNT TELEVISION

DIY blockbuster?

Will Forte isn't the only guy in Hollywood who loves "MacGyver." The secret agent man, lampooned by Forte on "SNL," is coming to the big screen, says The Hollywood Reporter.

"We think we're a stick of chewing gum, a paper clip and an A-list writer away from a global franchise," said Richard Brener of New Line, the studio working on the big-screen remake of the iconic 1980s ABC series.

Original star Richard Dean Anderson is not attached to the movie project, says the Reporter. Allow RedEye to suggest a few options.

THE VELVET ROPE

Samberg

Absolutely Andy

Andy Samberg is heading to MTV. The "Saturday Night Live" standout will host the MTV Movie Awards on May 31, the network announced Monday. Samberg, who wrote for the awards prior to "SNL," said in a statement that his homecoming will be sweet, and he "can't wait to act really important."

Obama on 'Tonight'

President Obama is getting the real L.A. treatment. He will visit "The Tonight Show With Jay Leno" during his trip to the West Coast on Thursday, The Associated Press reports. NBC will tape the program and then air it that night, after Obama has returned to Washington.

Banks

Model behavior

Tyra Banks tells usmagazine.com that aspiring models who were affected by the "America's Next Top Model" melee Saturday still will have a chance to compete. "We are doing everything we can to make sure that all the girls who weren't seen get an opportunity to audition," she said in a statement Monday.

'City' finale left hanging

A call to friend Lauren Conrad, love advice from designer Diane von Furstenberg and an unexpected visit from an ex-boyfriend. It all happened to Whitney Port on the season finale of MTV's "The City" on Monday night. Port's ex, Jay, says he made a mistake in breaking up with her and loves her. But it's too little, too late.

"I just need to be on my own right now," she said. To be continued.
